WIREFRAMES

Version 2.3

Version Control	Open issues:
Ver. 1.0 – Initial Draft Ver. 2.2 – New security measures added Ver 2.3 – On Log In page, removed the "I verify that I am over 13" checkbox.

-TERMINOLOGY_____

What is a Wireframe?

A wireframe is a blue print that defines a web page's content and functionality. It does not convey design - e.g. colors, graphics, or fonts. Every wireframe has been assigned a numerical ID that matches the ID structure listed on the sitemap.

What is a Sitemap?

Throughout the design process a sitemap is used to visually represent the hierarchical and, to a limited extend, the navigational structure of your website (acting like a Table of Contents). It lists and provides numerical IDs for all web pages within your site.

What is a User Flow?

A User Flow (aka User Interface - flow diagram) displays basic interactions that users have with your website showing you the “journey” users will make through the site. A user flow is NOT a Data Flow Diagram (DFD) because it omits the technical and back-end functionality details.
